Second Election Party Rain, Lightning, and Double-Primary

Arkansas' first experience with this new double-primary law left everybody, from candidates to voters and newspaper people, pretty well tired out Wednesday. It was the second Election Night party in two weeks — and an Election Night party, like a fever, just has to run its course, which is usually all night.

VIENNA — (AP) — The foreign ministers of Germany and Italy arrived by plane from Salzburg Wednesday night for the Vienna conference which is to attempt Thursday to end the strife between Hungary and Rumania along the line approved by the Axis.

Axis Hurries Conference

BUDAPEST — (AP) — The Rome-Berlin Axis rushed its diplomatic forces Wednesday toward a "hurryup" four-power conference at Vienna to settle the Hungarian-Rumanian dispute over Transylvania and to prevent repetition of the Russian-Rumanian-Hungarian clashes in the Balkans.

Berlin dispatches said Hitler received Count Ciano, Italian foreign minister, and his Bavarian chamberlain, for a conference preliminary to the four-power talks in Vienna Thursday.

Urgency of the talks Thursday was emphasized by dispatches from Bucharest which for the first time gave official Rumanian confirmation of reports that hundreds of soldiers were killed and wounded in a border battle with the Russians and that three Russian planes had been shot down by Rumanian fighters.

6 Nazi Planes Downed
LONDON — (AP) — British defenders shot down six aircraft Wednesday afternoon, the air ministry announced when two wedge formations, one of 18 and another of 21 planes, flew over the Kentish coast in an attempt to penetrate London's ring defenses.

Both formations were broken up by the British said. One savage 30 minute battle raged from the middle of Kent to the Thames and a residential section of the town was bombed.

The first formation of 18 bombers roared over Folkestone dropped salvo incendiary and time-fused gasoline bombs. The British government said that damage was done only to houses.

Weisenberger, Byers, Pn'cost, Feild, Winners

Hempstead for Justice J. S. Holt and Atty. Gen. Jack Holt

The battle for Hempstead county judge, tightest of any race in a decade, saw a sensational finish at 1:15 o'clock Wednesday morning when McCaskill, the final box to report, overturned a 70-vote lead of Fred Luck and put John L. Wilson three votes ahead.

The complete unofficial vote in Tuesday's Democratic primary election, tabulated by The Star Tuesday night, and re-checked Wednesday morning, gives for county judge:

Wilson 2,162
Luck 2,159

The official canvass will be made Friday morning in Hope. The complete unofficial vote includes all 37 Hempstead precincts and the absentees.

The neck-and-neck county judge's race was typical of the entire election. The only contest which developed into a walk-away was Royce Weisenberger's nearly three-to-one victory over Jim Bearden for the

Vital Puerto Rico Defense Base Will Not Be Ready for Two Years, But U. S. Is Getting Busy

Planes Without Hangars, Men Sleep in Tents, Says Observer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico. — Puerto Rico is the most important link in United States defense of the Caribbean area and the Panama Canal. It will be a key spot in plans to defend the western hemisphere with a chain of bases leased from Great Britain.

Yet there is not one completely adequate defense base—land, naval or air—in Puerto Rico.

Since last September the U. S. has maintained a "neutrality patrol" of about 15 planes at San Juan, P. R. Daily flights are made, sometimes circling the greater part of the Caribbean area in a single day.

These planes are kept in the open, awaiting construction of hangars. Ground crews sleep in pup tents pending completion of barracks. Repair facilities are inadequate.

When completed the new San Juan air base project will be the largest advance aviation base off the United States. Its "possible capacity," naval officials say, will be 100 light and medium weight bombers. It will have complete shops for plane repair, overhauling and spare parts supply.

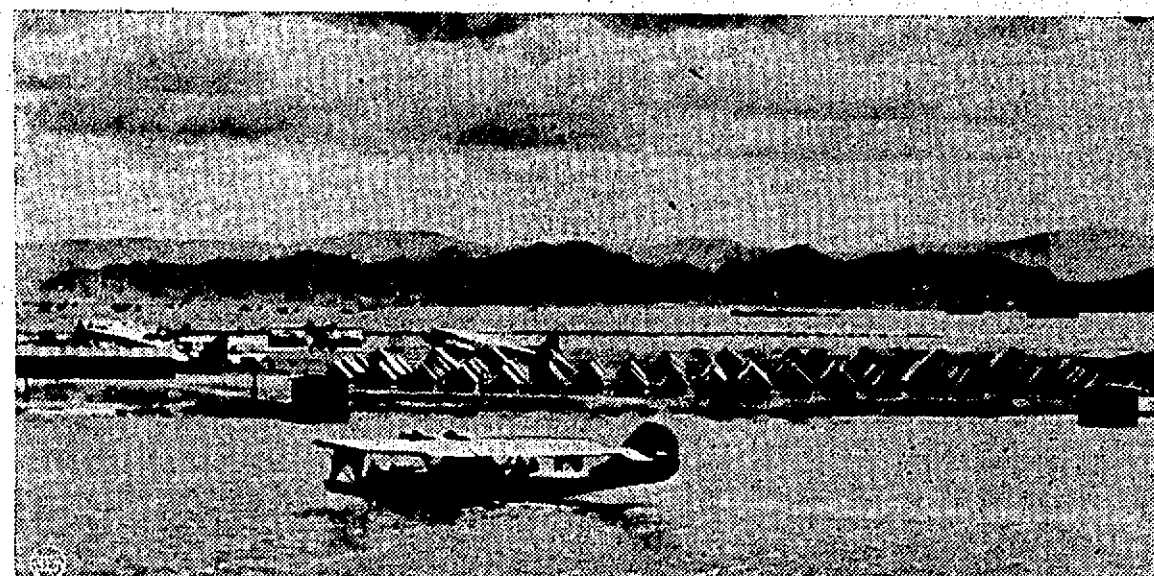

But it won't be completed for two years.

The base site was nearly under water a year ago. Much of it still belongs to the sea. The visitor sinks in over his shoe tops.

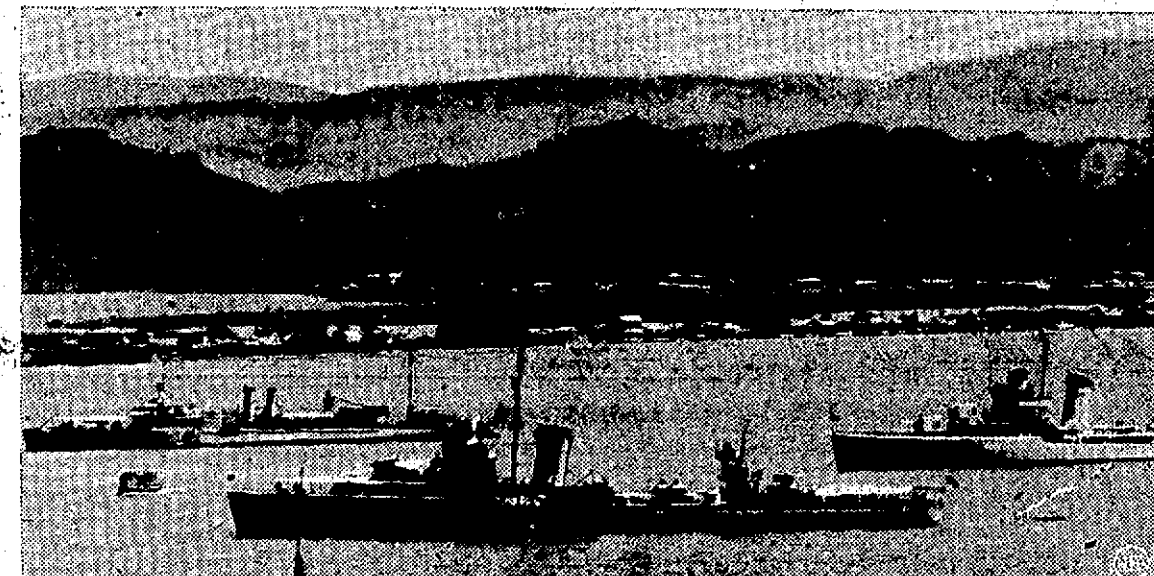

Officers Face Facts

Established as late as January, 1940 was the new tenth naval district, extending eastward from Windward Passage and including the Virgin Islands.

The district is in charge of naval construction and will have jurisdiction over all shore activities, "with the mission of advancing the work of the forces afloat," Capt. R. A. Spruance has been put in charge. He's assisted by Lieut. Comm. Johnson of the navy engineering corps in charge of construction; Captain Clark, chief of staff; and Commander Walker, chief Underscored for emphasis under the newly-created district are the aviation project at San Juan, a dry dock being built by the insular government, and a smaller naval station at St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands.

Share the Burden
With the Guard

Soon now members of the national guard and reserve corps are going to begin leaving civilian life for a year's tour of duty on active service.

The uniform is going to be seen in places where it has seldom been seen in the past. Thousands of families and business offices and factories will see the vacant chair, the cleared desk, the bench or machine on which a new hand is being "broken in."

In the past, national guard and reserve corps service did not mean these things. These peacetime soldiers gave up their regular vacation time to learn how to defend their country. Their absences in training were brief.

But now being called up for training means real disruption in personal and working lives. It is no longer enough that American soldiers can be given brief courses in funda-mentals and called ready. War as Endowed is it to our eyes today means skill and teamwork comparable to that of a well-oiled football team.

This takes time. These young men are giving it.

All honor to them! These national guardsmen and reserves are the men who saw the need when the rest did not see it. They are the ones who gave evenings, and week-ends, and vacations to their country when the rest were indifferent. They have had unpleasant service to perform in cases of domestic disorder or natural catastrophe. They have been sneered at as "in complacent," and sniffed at by the complacent.

They stuck to their organizations in the lean years of care. Now the nation calls them first. Now they know better than the sneerers and sniffers.

The duty on which they will soon embark is not theirs alone. Those who do not go also have a duty. It is to cooperate and help in every possible way to minimize the sacrifices they make.

So far as possible their jobs should be kept ready for their return, so that in addition to a year of their lives, they need not also face the prospect of "beginning over" when their training is over. Consideration and help for their families and obligations is another.

These young men are about to shoulder, voluntarily, their obligation as citizens to bear arms in defense of their country.

This does not shift the obligations of others to their shoulders. It creates additional obligations for those who do not march.

Are You Superstitious
About Warts?

By RUTH FARRAR
NEA Special Correspondent

Have you any warts? Then count them and put the same number of rocks in a sack. Drop the sack in the middle of a crossroads. The first passenger by to pick up the sack will inherit the warts.

If this fails, don't despair. American folklore in the large collection of Dr. B. A. Cartwright of the University of Oklahoma includes hundreds of superstitions. Here are other ways of losing the pesky things:

Squeeze juice from a bean leaf on a wart. In three days the wart will disappear.

Your wart will go away if you rub it in dirt from a new grave.

Wear a copper cent on a string around your neck and your warts will leave.

If you steal your neighbor's dis-hrag, your warts will disappear.

To cause warts to go away, rub them with the juice of a dandelion, with tobacco juice, with milkweed juice, or rub them with a stalk of green mustard.

Warts will go away if you sell them to someone and receive money for them.

A third son born after his father's death has magic power to remove warts.

Count all your warts and tell your aunt how many you have; if she does not tell anyone, your warts will disappear.

Rub your warts with coffee grounds,
put the grounds in a bag and bury it.
The warts will leave.

To make your warts leave, wash them at midnight in water found in a hollow tree-stump.

Rub poke-root on your warts to make them disappear.

Rub your wart with a grain of corn and drop the grain into a well. The wart will leave when the grain rots.

Catch a live fish and rub it on your warts to cure them.

Hold a halibone on your wart until it melts. The wart will go in a short time.

Put a katydid on your wart. It will remove the wart.

Tie as many knots in a twine string as you have warts. Suspend the string under the eaves of the house where the water can drip on the knots. It will wash all your warts off.

If you touch a wart during a thunderclap, the wart will soon disappear.

That one can rid himself of warts by going mountain climbing in a thunderstorm is the belief of Leonard C.
Chatwin, a young scientist at the University of British Columbia.

Recently, Chatwin, a member of the British Columbia Mountaineering Club, described how, with a fellow member, he had been caught in a thunderstorm while scaling an 8000-foot peak. Chatwin's partner, who had warts, lost them a week after the mountain thunderstorm and attributed it to the forks of invisible lightning that struck their axes, setting up a "steady buzzing hiss."

"Tips" to Stewardess Give Mean for "Thank You" Gifts

By RUTH MILLETT
NEA Service Staff Writer

How to show your appreciation of the services of the pretty, capable airline stewardess who made your trip so pleasant is a problem that stumps many a modern traveler. You see, an airline stewardess is not permitted to accept tips, from even the most grateful passengers.

The common solution to the problem, says Miss Ruth Flekke, Chief Stewardess for United Airlines, is to send the stewardess a gift. She has noticed that the gifts made by grateful passengers to stewardesses generally are tied up in some way with the passenger's business.

Watches, Hats and Shakespeare.
For instance (though this does not happen every flight) the vice-president of a watch manufacturing company once thanked Miss Flekke for a pleasant trip by sending her a wrist watch.

Other in-their-line-of-business gifts received by United Airlines stewardesses are a make-up kit from a woman in the beauty business; a card which gave the stewardess the right to buy "the cutest hats you ever saw" at half price, given by the proprietor of a millinery store in Chicago; a coffee pot from someone in the hardware business; and a leather-bound volume of Shakespeare from a book-dealer.

There is an idea in this for any person who wishes to express his appreciation for another's kindness, whether the person is an airline stewardess or a neighbor.

Jelly, Tabbies and Gold Teeth
Don't feel that there are only a few conventional gifts which you may make. If you are a housewife and take great pride in your jelly, let that take the place of a box of candy as a gift of appreciation.

And if you are a man who is handy with tools, make a coffee table or build book-shelves for the neighbors who occasionally look after your children for an evening.

And that is a reminder that one man
I know gives a young spruce or pine tree to home-owning friends instead of a more conventional gift.

A dentist once told me that he gave his old colored cook a gold tooth to show his appreciation for her twenty years of loyal service. She had it set right up front—and was very proud of it.

Frontiers Disregarded By Alsatian Weeds

BASEL, Switzerland —(P)— Any wind from Alsace and the Vosges is an ill wind for thousands of Swiss farmers.
War drove Alsatian and Vosges farmers away from their fields after the 1939 harvest and they couldn't get back for 1940.
What once were rich fields now are forests of weeds, going to seed. The winds wait for the seeds for miles, with no regard for frontiers. Farmers of lower north-western Switzerland are fighting a losing battle against weeds in hitherto immaculate fields.

Football School to Scrimmage

Taylor and Green of Hope Are Outstanding

LITTLE ROCK — Two days of hard practice behind them, the North and South squads of the Arkansas Coaching School are scheduled to scrimmage among themselves on the Little Rock High School practice field at 5 Tuesday afternoon. The squads climax the week's session by playing a game in the Little Rock stadium Saturday night.
Coached by Fred Thomson and Glen Rosa, the Norths underwent a hard dummy scrimmage Tuesday. David Paul Jones of Fort Smith, Ray Taylor of Hope, Bob Cope off Forrest City and Bill Fortner of North Little Rock impressed in the backfield. Standouts in the line were George Lalman of Fayetteville, Norman Green of Hope, E. W. Goelzer of North Little Rock and Kelton of Conway.
The Souths, coached by George Cole and Gene Lambert, also had their heroes in a light scrimmage Tuesday. No. 1 backs were Ray and Bob Hudson off Pine Bluff. Charley Steed off Little Rock and Jimmy Umstead of Subiaco. Line lights were "Virgil" ("Red") Johnson of Malvern, W. S. LaFite of Pine Bluff, Cecil Kemp of Warren and Paul Paladino of Little Rock Catholic High.
Game officials said that the demand for tickets has "exceeded expectations" and a capacity crowd likely will see the first all-star high school contest in the history of the state.

Blue Ridge Berries Find Way to Market

GALAX, Va. —(P)— Blackberries by the tank-car again have gone from the Blue Ridge mountains to the nation's canneries.
The berries always have grown in this section, but for years rotted on the bushes.
In 1935, however, Mahlon Collins astounded residents by offering cash for all the berries they could pick.
The business grew steadily. In 1937, Collins shipped 25 carloads of berries in barrels. Last year he began using tank cars and shipped 17 to New York city alone. The pickers received about $20,000, and did about as well this year. Pickers receive about 15 cents a gallon or $40 a ton.

"You Can't Miss It"

When you're looking for some place in the country, and haven't a road map, you naturally stop along the road to ask directions. Almost always, your volunteer guide winds up his bewildering list of local landmarks and his vague arm-wavings with the cheerful comment, "You can't miss it!"

But sometimes you do.

When you're looking for "bood buys" in town, don't grope your way along. Shop first in the pages of this paper, to get your bearings. Here the best merchants advertise their best merchandise. Here the real values pass in review. Sitting comfortably at home, you can compare products and prices — then go straight to the store, the floor, the counter that has exactly what you want!

You save hours of hunting, hoping. You save money too.

"You can't miss it!"

By E. L. BULWER

MR. FERDINAND FITZROY was one of those models of perfection of which a human father and mother can produce but a single example—Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy was, therefore, an only son. He was such an amazing favorite with both his parents that they resolved to ruin him; accordingly, he was exceedingly spoiled, never annoyed by the sight of a book and had as much plum-cake as he could eat. Happy would it have been for Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy could he always have eaten plum-cake and remained a child. "Never," says the Greek Tragedian, "reckon a mortal happy till you have witnessed his end." A most beautiful creature was Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy! Such eyes—such hair—such teeth—such a figure—such manners, too—and such an irresistible way of tying his neckcloth! When he was about sixteen, a crabbed old uncle represented to his parents the propriety of teaching Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy to read and write. Though not without some difficulty, he convinced them—for he was exceedingly rich, and riches in an uncle are wonderful arguments respecting the nurture of a nephew whose parents have nothing to leave him. So our hero was sent to school. He was naturally (I am not joking now) a very sharp, clever boy; and he came on surprisingly in his learning. The schoolmaster's wife liked handsome children. "What a genius will Master Ferdinand Fitzroy be, if you take pains with him!" said she to her husband.

"Pooh, my dear, it is of no use to take pains with him."

"And why, love?"

"Because he is a great deal too handsome ever to be a scholar."

"And that's true enough, my dear!" said the schoolmaster's wife.

So, because he was too handsome to be a scholar, Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy remained the lag of the fourth form!

They took our hero from school. "What profession shall he follow?" said his mother.

"My first cousin is the Lord Chancellor," said his father, "let him go to the bar."

The Lord Chancellor dined there that day. Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy was introduced to him. His Lordship was a little, rough-faced, beetle-browed, hard-featured man, who thought beauty and idleness the same thing—and a parchment skin the legitimate complexion for a lawyer.

"Send him to the bar!" said he, "no, no, that will never do! Send him into the army; he is much too handsome to become a lawyer."

"And that's true enough, my Lord!" said the mother. So they bought Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy a cornet in the Regiment of Dragoons.

Things are not learned by inspiration. Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy had never ridden at school, except when he was hoisted. He was, therefore, a very indifferent horseman; they sent him to the riding school and everybody laughed at him.

"He is a d—d ass!" said Cornet Horsephiz, who was very ugly. "A horrid puppy!" said Lieutenant St. Squintem, who was still uglier. "If he does not ride better, he will disgrace the regiment!" said Captain Rivalante, who was very good-looking. "If he does not ride better, we will cut him!" said Colonel Everdrill, who was a wonderful martinet. "I say, Mr. Bumpemwell (to the riding-master), make that youngster ride less like a miller's sack."

"Pooh, sir, he will never ride better."

"And why the d—d will he not?"

"Bless you, Colonel, he is a great deal too handsome for a cavalry officer!"

"True!" said Cornet Horsephiz.

"Very true!" said Lieutenant St. Squintem. "We must cut him!" said the Colonel.

And Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy was accordingly cut. Our hero was a youth of susceptibility. He quitted the Regiment and challenged the Colonel. The Colonel was killed!

"What a terrible blackguard is Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy!" said the Colonel's relations.

"Very true!" said the world.

The parents were in despair! They were not rich; but our hero was an only son, and they sponged hard upon the crabbed old uncle!

"He is very clever," said they both, "and may do yet."

So they borrowed some thousands from the uncle and bought his beautiful nephew a seat in Parliament.

Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy was ambitious and desirous of retrieving his character. He fagged like a dragon, conned pamphlets and reviews, got Ricardo by heart, and made notes on the English Constitution.

He rose to speak.

"What a handsome fellow!" whispered one member.

"Ah, a coxcomb!" said another.

TOO HANDSOME

A condensation of a neglected classic by an earlier Wodehouse

"Never do for a speaker!" said a third, very audibly.

And the gentlemen on the opposite benches sneered and heard! Impudence is only indigenous in Mithras and an orator is not made in a day. Discouraged by his reception, Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy grew a little embarrassed.

"Told you so!" said one of his neighbors.

"Fairly broke down!" said another.

"Too fond of his hair to have anything in his head," said a third, who was considered a wit.

"Hear, hear!" cried the gentleman on the opposite benches.

Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy sat down—he had not shone; but, in justice, he had not failed. Many a first-rate speaker had begun worse; and many a county member had been declared a phoenix of promise upon half his merit.

Not so, thought the heroes of corn laws.

"Your Adonises never make orators!" said a crack speaker with a wry nose.

"Nor men of business either," added the chairman of a committee, with a face like a kangaroo's.

"Poor devil!" said the civilist of the set. "He's a deuced deal too handsome for a speaker! By Jove, he is going to speak again—this will never do; we must cough him down!"

And Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy was accordingly coughed down.

Our hero was now seven or eight and twenty, handsomer than ever, and the adoration of all the young ladies at Almack's.

"We have nothing to leave you," said the parents, who had long spent their fortune and now lived on the credit of having once enjoyed it. "You are the handsomest man in London; you must marry an heiress."

"I will," said Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy.

Miss Helen Convolvulus was a charming young lady, with a hair-clip and six thousand a-year. To Miss Helen Convolvulus then our hero paid his addresses.

Heaven! what an uproar her relations made about the matter. "Easy to see his intentions," said one: "a handsome fortune-hunter, who wants to make the best of his person!" "Handsome is that handsome does," says another, "he was turned out of the army and murdered his Colonel."

"Never marry a beauty," said a third, "he can admire none but himself." "Will have so many mistresses," said a fourth. "Make you perpetually jealous," said a fifth. "Spend your fortune," said a sixth. "And break your heart," said a seventh.

Miss Helen Convolvulus was prudent and wary. She saw a great deal of justice in what was said; and was sufficiently contented with liberty and six thousand a-year, not to be highly impatient for a husband; but our heroine had no aversion to a lover; especially to so handsome a lover as Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy. Accordingly, she neither accepted nor discarded him; but kept him on hope and suffered him to get into debt with his tailor and his coachmaker, on the strength of becoming Mr. Fitzroy Convolvulus. Time went on and excuses and delays were easily found; however, our hero was sanguine, and so were his parents. A breakfast at Chiswick and a putrid fever carried off the latter, within one week of each other; but not till they had blessed Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy and rejoiced that they had left him so well provided for.

Now, then, our hero depended solely upon the crabbed old uncle and Miss Helen Convolvulus. The former, though a baronet and a satirist, was a banker and a man of business. He looked very distastefully at the Hyperian curls and white teeth of Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy.

"If I make you my heir," said he, "I expect you will continue the bank."

"Certainly, sir!" said the nephew.

"Humph!" grunted the uncle, "a pretty fellow for a banker!"

Debtors grew pressing to Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy and Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy grew pressing to Miss Helen Convolvulus. "It is a dangerous thing," said she, timidly, "to marry a man so admired. Will you always be faithful?"

"By heaven!" cried the lover—

"Heigho!" sighed Miss Helen Convolvulus and Lord Rufus Pumlion entering, the conversation changed.

But the day of the marriage was fixed. And Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy bought a new curio. By Apollo, how handsome he looked in it! A month before the wedding-day, the uncle died. Miss Helen Convolvulus was quite tender in her condolences—

"Cheer up, my Ferdinand," said she, "for your sake, I have discarded Lord Rufus Pumlion!"

"Adorable condescension!" cried our hero, "but Lord Rufus Pumlion is only four feet two, and has hair like a peony!"

"All men are not so handsome as Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy!" was the reply.

Away goes our hero, to be present at the opening of his uncle's will.

"I leave," said the testator (who, I have before said, was a bit of a satirist), "my share of the bank, and the whole of my fortune, legacies excepted, to"—(here Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy wiped his beautiful eyes with a cambric handkerchief, exquisitely broad) "my natural son, John Spriggs, an industrious, painstaking youth, who will do credit to the bank. I did once intend to have made my nephew Ferdinand my heir; but so cutting a head can have no talent for accounts. I want my successor to be a man of business, not beauty; and Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy is a great deal too handsome for a banker. His good looks will, no doubt, win him any heiress in town. Meanwhile, I leave him, to buy a dressing case, a thousand pounds."

"A thousand devils!" said Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy, banging out of the room. He flew to his mistress. She was not at home. "Lies," says the Italian proverb, "have short legs, but truths, if they are unpleasant, have terrible long ones!" The next day Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy received a most obliging note of dismissal.

"I wish you every happiness," said Miss Helen Convolvulus, in conclusion, "but my friends are right; you are much too handsome for a husband!"

And the week after, Miss Helen Convolvulus became Lady Rufus Pumlion.

"Alas! sir," said the bailiff, as a day or two after the dissolution of Parliament, he was jogging along with Mr. Ferdinand Fitzroy, in a hackney coach bound to the King's Bench, "Alas! sir, what a pity it is to take so handsome a gentleman to prison!"

A ZEBRA WINS ITS STRIPES!

Feeling a Bit Tough and Truculent, "Lottie" Slanted Back Her Ears When This Picture Was Made, and "Sugar" Looks None Too Pleased at the Prospects Herself. After All, She Has Been Thrown by Her Pet Several Times.

"She Was Both Proud and Shy, and She Caught Every Eye . . .": That Was True of Little "Sugar" Akers the First Time She Wandered Down Into Town Astride "Lottie." Today San Antonio Is Used to the Strange Spectacle.

YOU may remember seeing, at one time or another, a zebra or two in the circus. Outside of that, the chances are, the only other place you have ever witnessed these strange, striped little animals, is in the zoo. After all, the African zebra has the reputation for being extremely difficult to domesticate. One of its idiosyncracies is a definite and violent reaction to colors of different kinds rather than to sights or sounds. Which is why, of course, the average owner of a zebra finds him so difficult to handle.

One must gasp, then, at the spectacle, displayed in photographs on this page, of what appears to be an almost completely domesticated zebra. "Lottie" is the zebra's name and she is the property of Mr. J. J. Akers who owns the Buckaroo Dude Ranch just outside of San Antonio, Texas. The little girl shown with "Lottie" in each photograph is Mr. Akers' little girl, "Sugar."

Akers, without whose presence "Lottie" will more often than not simply refuse to go on with the show. Don't think for a minute, however, that "Sugar" has an easy time with "Lottie." The zebra, domesticated appearing as she is, has more than once thrown her 9-year-old mistress.

According to Mr. Akers it took well over a year to break "Lottie" to ride and to condescend to do a few tricks. He almost exhausted his patience and a supply of rolled oats with which he must equip himself constantly when in the presence of the temperamental animal. In one more year "Sugar" and her papa hope to have "Lottie" thoroughly trained so that they will be able to feature her in the Akers' rodeo. At present, "Lottie" still reacts violently to strange smells and, it is declared, is capable of whirling about and biting a person twice before the wink of an eye.

Watch Out for a Triple Play

Axis Powers Are Screening Off Broader Strategy

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON — By focusing world attention on the battle for Britain, the axis powers are screening off their broader strategy—a triple play against all the great strongholds of the British Empire within their reach.

These are: The British Isles themselves, a natural fortress for blockading all of Western Europe; (2) Gibraltar, the route of supplies from South America for Central Europe; and (3) Suez, tourniquet against the Balkans and Eastern Europe.

Naturally the British Isles must be the No. 1 objective, but undercover reports reaching Washington indicate that both Hitler and Mussolini consider their battle plans against Suez and Gibraltar of equal immediate importance.

The German high command must take into account the possibility that the British can perform a miracle and turn back the first attack against them. The weather might prevent another main attack this year, thus leaving the British blockade intact for another season. That might mean starvation among populations at Hitler's back.

Therefore regardless of the battle for Britain, the axis partners must weave other strings for their bow. These are attacks against Gibraltar and Suez, where fighting is possible all year round.

Fleet Bases: The Goal

If these attacks should succeed, and the British fleet repair bases be destroyed at Gibraltar and Suez, axis strategy would be temporarily successful, even if the first battle for Britain were lost. The repair bases, with their oil from Palestine and naval stores from Gibraltar, are what make the British fleet in the Mediterranean self-sufficient.

These advantages would follow successful onslaught:

1. North African wheat and other supplies could resume their normal flow to Europe.

2. Egyptian cotton and other African raw materials could again be shipped to continental factories.

3. Fuel could again be shipped in bulk to Europe by the tanker routes from Russia and Rumania.

4. The South Atlantic would be again open to axis trade.

It is an open military secret that the German army no longer considers Gibraltar impregnable against combined attack from the land and air. Italy has the air force. The Spanish have the artillery and the military skill. And France is supposed to have given German army engineers permission to build huge gun emplacements along the Spanish mainland back of the rock.

One For Mussolini

Meanwhile, Mussolini fences for Alexandria, the other great British fleet-repair base in the Mediterranean. His first thrust into Somaliland has been successful. Two more remain—attacks on Khartoum, mid-point on the Nile in Egypt, and the fountain head of British power, Alexandria.

Co. whether Britain herself holds out or not, watch for the other two throws in the axis triple play.

SERIAL STORY

LOVE ON THE LINE

BY PAUL FRIGGENS

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Visiting her homestead site with Ashton Oaks, Carrie is overwhelmed by the intensity of the new week. Later, at the hotel, Oaks tries to sell her town lots, promising the railroad will come. She shows Springs, Mark contradicts Oaks, saying the agent when he calls Mark a liar. Carrie stops the fight, fearing Mark will be killed.

CHAPTER III

"SORTA stirred things up last night, didn't yuh?" Newt greeted Mark outside the livery stable next morning. "Hell, I don't see why somethin' like that can't happen to me when there's a pretty woman around to show off to."

Mark grinned. "Wasn't exactly showing off, Newt."

"Well, it sure worked out that way, her a-cingin' to your lapels and Oaks down and all." Newt wiped his shiny, bald head. "Gettin' mighty hot, Mark. Say, what do you suppose that Oaks was up to there in the hotel last night when you hit him?"

"Oh, just another land agent trying to make some quick money," Mark said. "New country like this is full of them."

"Always something worse'n the hot weather and grasshoppers," said Newt. "What can I do for you, Mark?"

"Got a good horse, Newt? I want to ride out to Rock Creek today. Be back by night."

"Best in the barn," and Newt disappeared inside the big, rambling building.

He came out quickly, leading a spirited sorrel. "Here you are, Mark. She ought to get you out there real lively. Say," he added, as an afterthought, "Rock Creek—that's where that Lane miss took up her claim, ain't it? Thinking of homesteadin' out there, too?"

They were having dinner when Mark rode up to Carrie's claim at Rock Creek around noon. The Taylors had hauled out supplies, window and door frames, boards and tin for a roof. Carrie had ridden out with them. She was to return to town with them, bring out more supplies in the morning.

The Taylors, living just a mile from Carrie, were going to bring over their plow the next day and turn the first furrows for Carrie's new home, the real "soddy" she had read about, but never had dreamed some day she would build.

"Get down off that horse and come in," greeted big Ed Taylor, laughing loudly and indicating the spot where Carrie's soddy would be built.

There was a moment of tension as Mark tipped his hat to both Carrie and Mrs. Taylor. Taylor introduced his wife, then turned to Carrie. "Miss Lane, this here is Mark Deuel. Filin' a claim, too, ain't you, Deuel?"

Mark nodded. "Miss Lane and I've met before." He thought Carrie reddened ever so slightly, fidgeted with her dress. "Why, yes, Taylor, I have been thinking of taking a claim out here on Rock Creek."

"Well, better get moving, then," Taylor put in, "she's going fast."

"That's why I'm here today," Mark explained.

They sat down to dinner, a cold meal of salt pork, canned tomatoes, and cornbread. Carrie, Mark noted, was herself again, gay, chatty, as she had been on the first morning he had eaten with her at Ma Parmley's.

"Wonder how far I'll have to go for water?" she said, turning to her neighbor.

"Well, don't know," Taylor looked at Mark. "But if she keeps on getting much dryer, probably three miles—straight down!"

IT was nearly 2 o'clock when Mark finally swung into his saddle, explaining he wanted to Carrie stepped closer. Her hand was on the saddle. She was pale, frightened.

"You won't see him again?" she begged. "Promise me that you won't?"

look over some more claims. Carrie watched him closely. As Mark started off, after saying goodbye to the Taylors, she walked a few paces toward his horse with him.

"Mr.—Mr. Deuel," she began awkwardly as Mark picked up his reins, adjusted the latigo, "I've been thinking about about that trouble in town at the hotel. I'm dreadfully sorry, but I haven't guess it was all pretty much of a mistake." She paused abruptly.

Mark, wordless for a moment, too, swung into the saddle, looked down at her. "I'm sorry, too, Miss Lane. I guess you just haven't been out here long enough, that's all. There are some things that happen in these new towns that can't go on."

Carrie stepped closer, her hand on the saddle. Suddenly, Mark saw she was pale, frightened.

"You—you won't see him again?"

"Well, if he runs into me—"

Mark stopped, deliberately, searching her deep, blue eyes.

"Oh, but you mustn't, you mustn't. Promise you won't." She looked up, fearful, straight into Mark's eyes, the tilt of her chin infinitely sweet.

"All right, Miss Lane," he promised. "I won't go looking for trouble—nor Oaks—and I hope he does the same for me." He tipped his hat, rode off.

He looked back once. She was standing where he had left her, watching him, her hands shading her eyes, and in that moment Mark Deuel wondered whether Carrie Lane loved him.

His horse splashed through the cool, shallow waters of Rock Creek, scrambled up the other side. To the north lay the homestead claims Mark had said he was going to look over. To the south lay town. Mark spurred his horse—south.

MARK was standing at the bar talking with Newt Gale about the land boom and the grasshoppers and the drought when Ashton Oaks swung through the door. Newt was saying that he'd heard over at the stageline that the claim jumpers were getting as thick as the land agents. But over in Pike county the settlers had fixed one of them. They smoked out the fellow with sulphur and then tossed black powder down his chimney.

"He shore did come out of that soddy," Newt roared, and slapped Mark's knee. "Say, Mark, how'd you like to try somethin' like that on that friend Oaks of yours?"

"All right," said Mark. "But I can't think Oaks'll be around that long."

He felt a heavy hand on his shoulder, whirled to face the scowling agent. Oaks was satless and his short, black hair seemed to bristle. The bird-like eyes now seemed to be smaller than ever. Instantly, Mark knew the man was drunk.

"Somebody mention my name here?" Oaks was snarling, insolent.

"Just indirectly," Mark answered, turning to face the bar again to ignore the agent. But Oaks jerked him back. Like a ruddy flame, then, the red crept up Mark's neck, flushed his face. He swung around, stepped down from the bar.

"Oaks," he said, and his voice was low, steady. "I don't argue with a drunk man."

Whether it was the sudden memory of Carrie Lane, standing there in the hotel and pleading with him not to fight, or standing there on the knoll at Rock Creek and still watching him when he looked back, Mark Deuel would never know what prompted his next move. Ignoring the agent again for the last time, he turned, said good night to Newt Gale and walked, slowly, deliberately toward the door. Others in the room were scarcely aware of the incident.

But Mark never reached the door. There was a shot; glass crashed and the place became pandemonium. Ashton Oaks lunged forward, Newt Gale after him. "Deuel," somebody yelled, "Mark Deuel, he shot at you!"

Axis Steps In

BUDAPEST, Hungary.—(AP)—The Hungarian and Rumanian foreign ministers, it was learned Tuesday night, have been summoned urgently to a conference with axis spokesmen in Vienna in an apparent move by Italy and Germany to make a quick settlement of the Balkan crisis lest Russia have opportunity to move further into that area. They were called to meet Thursday in Vienna with Count Ciano, the Italian foreign minister.

Just before this became known, the German and Italian ministers to Rumania left Bucharest by plane for consultations with their governments carrying detailed reports of a sharp and bloody clash between Soviet and Rumanian troops. At about the same time, German and Italian ministers to Budapest also left here.

The Vienna meeting was said to be designed to force a settlement of Hungary's claims upon Rumania for Transylvania, which would avoid a war disturbing to the Balkan productivity so necessary to Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini in their war with Britain, and make an end to the long crisis atmosphere. Ciano and German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop will attend.

Accounts of the Soviet-Rumanian clash first reached Budapest in diplomatic dispatches from Rumania and were confirmed by Soviet circles in Bucharest. These dispatches indicated that the fight, in which several hundred troops were killed, began after Russians over-stepped the Rumanian

Senate Weighs Draft — 10 Members Present

While Bruce Catton vacations, other members of NEA Service's Washington bureau pinch-hit for him.

By MILTON BRONNER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON — The senate is debating one of the most vital and controversial bills ever presented to congress in time of peace. The conscription bill has stirred up strong feeling, both pro and con.

You would think, in such circumstances, that every one of the well-paid senators would be in his seat, listening to what is said, keeping an open mind, weighing all sides as expressed in the debate, finally making a judicious decision.

But the other afternoon, when one of the senators who opposes the bill was dropping along in a leisurely time-killing style, there were just 10 senators lolling in their seats.

Some few were listening. Others were reading documents or penning letters. Nobody was rude enough to point out that there was not a quorum—that would have started cull-bells ringing, disturbing the afternoon fiesta of some statesmen.

Holt Is In No Rush

It is not only the lackadaisical way of treating the bill that shocks, but some of the arguments used. Rush Holt, who retires soon from his West Virginia senatorship, gave some results of his profound thinking about life in the army.

"What is the theory in an army? A private salutes a corporal; a corporal salutes a sergeant; a sergeant salutes a lieutenant; a lieutenant salutes a major . . . In other words, it is the old caste system, the system that Europe had and still has, but not the system that we have seen in America. In other words, the one who is a little lower than another salutes the man above him in rank and so on. The last man down, the boy we are going to conscript, is going to shine the boots of the men who want conscription."

Nobody interrupted him to say that the senate, whether it eventually passes the bill or not, was wasting precious time in this matter of preparation just as crushed France did and just as Britain, now fighting for its life, did.

France and Britain also had men who, like the American senators, thought there was plenty of time to prepare for defense.

But Hitler knew better. That's why Hitler expressed such contempt for democracies. He said they could always be relied upon to blunder in defense matters.

In 1940, with war raging in many parts of the globe, there is a decided air of unreality about the actions and speeches in the Senate. A person who had witnessed some of the terrible results of delay in the Old World had to pinch himself to be sure this was really an American governmental body considering what may be a life or death matter.

Draft Wealth Idea Not Dead

Senators who believe wealth as well as manpower should be drafted in an emergency are not discouraged by defeat of the Lee amendment.

Senator Claude Pepper of Florida will introduce a conscription bill amendment the right to take over essential war industries.

Pepper proposes such action only as a last resort. If such a drastic measure were necessary, the munitions maker would continue as the employer, but management would be under governmental control.

The manufacturer would receive "fair compensation" when he surrendered control. Senator Pepper thinks 4 or 5 per cent profit on war orders is "fair compensation."

Isolationist and "short-of-war" senators stand shoulder to shoulder in debate on the wealth draft issue. Senator Clark of Missouri promised his colleagues they could not evade the issue by shelving the Lee amendment.

Washington's Offer — $60 a Year — in Gold

BAKER, Ore.—(AP)—Lee Wright discovered a yellowed placard in an old barn inviting young men to join the army—the army of General George Washington. It read:

"To all brave, healthy, able-bodied and well-disposed young men in this neighborhood who have an inclination to join the troops now raising under General Washington for the defense of the United States against the hostile designs of foreign enemies."

It offered $60 a year in gold and closed with the words "God Save the United States."

If we could leave the earth, traveling into space as far in one second as light travels in an entire year, we would have to continue for 16 years to reach the distance already penetrated by modern telescopes.

defeated and the Fascist powers decided to use the British fleet for an attack against European or American possessions in the antechamber of the Panama Canal.

"I am not yet convinced of air power destructibility against naval units," he said. "Dunkirk partially exploded this claimed superiority. But we shall probably have the answer before long in the English Channel."

"Suppose the answer is unfavorable; what about our readiness in Puerto Rico?" I asked.

The official glanced in the direction of the flats partly under water, where land is still being filled in. The gesture was self-explanatory.

Uncle Sam is getting busy in Puerto Rico. But every naval official down here knows we are behind schedule, in face of the pressure of world events.

A new army base near Aguadilla in northwestern Puerto Rico under construction less than a year, is expected to cost around $30,000,000.

Between 2500 and 3000 civilians are employed on the project. In for stress eventually are coastal artillery, anti-aircraft units and army bomber squadrons.

Planes Wait on Construction

At present the army maintains in Puerto Rico a reconnaissance squadron of fewer than 30 planes, the number to be increased as soon as permanent construction is completed. In charge of the army's project is Gen. Edmund L. Daley, departmental commander and engineer from Boston.

A skeleton 65th regiment—two battalions of native troops with American officers—was previously stationed in Puerto Rico. But aside from the naval communications radio station and the military garrison, nothing was based here prior to the outbreak of war in Europe.

Now Uncle Sam appears to mean business for the army, navy and air corps in Puerto Rico.

For the last two years the United States has maintained a marine pa-

Earliest Election Date

The earliest election held in America probably were those of the delegates to the Virginia assembly in 1619, but the earliest date mentioned in records was that of the election for John Winthrop as governor of Massachusetts in 1631.

trof of less than a squadron at St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands, where there is a small marine airfield. This force is to be strengthened.

Best battleship anchorage for the U. S. fleet is at Culebra, P. R. There is nothing to indicate as yet that our navy strategists have any intention of making San Juan harbor a battleship anchorage. This would require extensive dredging.

For the rest, the French have little in the entire West Indies. Martinique alone of their meager holdings in the Antilles has anything resembling a contribution to eastern Caribbean security: a small naval base and submarine facilities, plus a dry dock for destroyers.

Britain heretofore has maintained a squadron at Bermuda. She has a dry dock at Trinidad for destroyers only, a battleship anchorage and rather insignificant airdrome at Barbados. There are small commercial airfields at Trinidad, Barbados and Jamaica.
